The human body consists of various organs which have specific functions but have to work as one entity, in order to facilitate optimum existence. This system is overlaid by several states of consciousness which can be evident through the subconscious mind at any given time.

Venturing into the world of practicing mantra can be daunting, frightening yet surprising enlightening. Mantra is also used as tools of and for power. Though confusing, it is nevertheless powerful. Simply put, mantra has the means of setting the mind free.

Chapter 2:

The Belief About And Power Of Mantras

Synopsis

Basically when the reference to mantra is made it is in connection to the power of the spoken word or sound. Many words are spoken that have little or no connection to the actual experience or implied consequences.

Looking A Little Deeper

If a person is warned about something verbally and the consequences are also explained the actual physical feeling of the consequences is not present and only implied. Similarly there are few words that can actually convey the exact equivalent of the experience but the power that the word carries is enough to imply the results.

It is a popular belief and accepted truth that repeating a mantra expounds tremendous power. Those who are very knowledgeable in the mantra field attest to this unexplained but ever present power. Abundance can take many forms, such as health, wealth, friends to name a few, all of which can be successfully attained with the influence of mantra as a result of repetitive chants. This then releases the unseen power in vibrations that work cosmically to the desired results.

Each mantra is said to be linked to its original source of an actual sage or historical person. Most of these tradition practices predate the written speech and as such further emphasize the power of the spoken word. Also accepted as a fact, is the form of meditation and intuition that is required, in order to participate with a degree of success. There is a direct link between the mantra sound and the chakras located throughout the human body.

The power of the mantra is explained as that of fire. Fire known for its destructive and also helpful qualities is the same as mantra is many ways. The power derived from mantra can be very destructive and energy sapping if not practiced under strict supervision by an experienced person. However as most practitioners have yet to reach the level of total enlightenment the danger is not really present.

Chapter 3:

Synopsis

When you hear something consistently enough, there is a very real possibility that it eventually becomes a reality in one's own mind. Repeat a rumor enough times and it will eventually become a wrongly accepted truth. That is the power of the spoken word, whether cosmically or not.

Thus a lot of "gurus" today advocate speaking out repetitively a desire with the intention of seeing it successfully manifesting into reality. The only problem with this is that some people take this to be literal and therefore do not put in any physical effort to reach the desired goal in the first place.

While there are yet others who take the mantra practice to the extreme, which eventually can lead to occult practices. Rituals and other negative elements are added on to create the environment needed to cause intimidation and control. This of course is not meant to be but not uncommon.

As the mantra incantations are said to create powerful vibes that are meant to “attract” cosmic forces, this power should never be underestimated or taken for granted. Just as these “outside” powers can be used to achieve good, it can just as easily be used to the opposite results.
